Historians of fascism working on transnationalism

- Roger Griffin, ‘International fascism’ in the interwar period
- Andrea Mammone, Italy and France
- Matteo Albanese and Pablo del Hierro, Spain and Italy
- Anton Shekhovtsov, Russia and Europe
- Martin Durham and Margaret Power: the extreme right have sought to construct their ‘imagined communities’ by evoking a sense of transnationalism, in ways that cut across national boundaries.
Oswald Mosley

“The extension of Patriotism; that is the necessity and that is the hope. The New Patriotism will extend to embrace all of like kind, but will not destroy the values of its kind by seeking the unnatural mingling of the old Internationalism which is proved to fail. The Universalism of like kind, within a new union of the spiritual and the material, will protect its members and its values.”
THE GREAT QUESTION for the British people is a simple one. Are they staying in or getting out of Europe? This question comes before all others, for if they answer 'Out' on referendum day they shut the door against any real solution to their problems, as we show in this issue. Yet if they vote 'In' this can be only the start, for the present Common Market is merely a half-way house to the complete European union needed today. The full answer is 'Yes' to Europe, and then go forward to unite Europe!

THE MAN WHO LED THE WAY

Let us turn from the old internationalism which always failed, and the old methods which utterly failed within a half-united Europe: inflation has not been stemmed, growing depression threatens bankruptcies and unemployment, living standards of the majority are sliding while a minority more than even the call to lead the way to a greater Europe. It is also a challenge to the British people to stand on their feet and act, not like the Britons of other days. They did not tamely accept the harsh facts of an unkind world. They did not cower within their sea-girt shores in any timid spirit of Little England. They went out, and won a great Empire, and for three hundred years this country led the world.

All this, in the end, was thrown away by defeatist politicians in recent years, a splendid heritage of infinite, promise sacrificed to the universal myth of 'world brotherhood' and 'world trade', two mirages now dissolving to reveal the communist and and we have not spoken yet'. So it is time to speak.

Let it be a great shout of 'Yes' to Europe, and let it ring through Europe on referendum day. Let it be a shout that shall even be heard in that far-off other world where the shades of great Englishmen rest today. Let Drake hear it, and Chatham, and Harry of Agincourt. Let the dead and the living know that Britons have had enough of defeatism, and the days of the defeatists are numbered!

Swedish Racial Nationalist

"Postal transmission of antisemitic literature received by a Manchester travel agency .... has been described as permissible by post office officials. The literature was sent from Sweden by the notorious antisemite Einar Aberg. Some weeks ago the Manchester Central Library received a quantity of antisemitic leaflets from Aberg."

"Jewish Chronicle", 19/2/60

Regarded by the Jews as one of their greatest enemies in the world today, Einar Aberg was born in Gothenbury in 1890. He began his work of enlightenment on the Jewish menace in 1933 within Sweden. In 1946 he expanded it into a world-wide circulation of leaflets and pamphlets, and today he is sending his literature in 9 languages to 25 countries in every continent.

As a result the Jews have feverishly

A remarkable pre-manipulation Brown-Brown benefit helped the huge wave of Liberal-Liberal Democratic Party, which would have swept Labour right out of power in 2005, had it not been for a series of tactical pacts and alliances. The result was a narrow victory for the Conservatives, but the Liberal Democrats emerged as the main opposition party, with a substantial increase in their vote share.

However, the real story of the election was the rise of the BNP, which gained significant support in the multi-cultural areas of London and the South East. The BNP’s success can be attributed to a combination of factors, including the perception that the mainstream parties were not doing enough to address issues of immigration and security.

The BNP’s breakthrough was a warning to all political parties that they need to address these issues head-on, or face the consequences of losing electoral support. The main parties have since begun to take immigration and security matters more seriously, but the BNP remains a force to be reckoned with in the political landscape.

As for the future, it is clear that the BNP will continue to be a force to be reckoned with in the political landscape. The party has shown that it is capable of gaining significant electoral support, and it is likely to continue to do so in the future. The main political parties will need to respond to this challenge in order to maintain their hold on power.

In conclusion, the 2005 election was a turning point in British politics, and the BNP’s success was a wake-up call for all political parties. It is clear that they will need to address the issues of immigration and security in a more serious manner, or face the consequences of losing electoral support.

The Historic meeting of the ‘Alliance of European Nationalist Movements’

Sat, 28/07/2012 - 08:00

The Historic meeting of the ‘Alliance of European Nationalist Movements’, took place in Cheshire on Tuesday 24th of July. This is the first of its kind and represents a sea-change in the direction of European politics, and the inauguration of this group has been led by our very own Nick Griffin MEP.

And, it will now be eligible to share the Taxpayer funds, which are currently shared by the Lib-Lab-Con parties.

Around 100 delegates from home and abroad packed the venue in the beautiful and very sunny Cheshire countryside, to mark the start of a major campaign for all European countries to regain self-rule in each of our homelands, and to break free of the tyranny of the European Union.

The EU is an insidious Communist cabal which dictates virtually every law, in every EU members’ country, and it is well past its sell-by date. The AENM was established to create a bond between all fellow nationalists who look forward to freedom and ditching the totalitarian ‘elected dictatorship’, which is the EU.

The AENM group is gaining momentum and will become a powerful force for change, and the nationalists’ voice will now be heard loud and clear.

Delegates came from England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Sweden, Italy, France, Belgium, Hungary, Spain and Holland, and we are all witnessing a tremendous growth in nationalism in our countries.
Conclusions

- British fascist leaders have not restricted their imagined communities to Britain alone:
  - For Mosley a new European patriotism was needed
  - For Jordan Northern European racial identity was central
  - For Griffin authentic connections with fellow ethno-nationalists from Europe would help develop the cause

- Ultimately, networking aboard does not help resolve the issue of marginalisation at home

- The most recent forms of extreme right activity have also found operating at the transnational level important so historians of fascism have a lot to say to those seeking to challenge the extreme right today.
